

John B. Davies, MD

Dr. John B. Davies joined Retina Consultants of Minnesota in 2009 and has established himself as a clinician, educator, and leader within the practice and the broader vitreoretinal community. He is board-certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology and holds memberships in the American Academy of Ophthalmology, the Minnesota Academy of Eye Physicians and Surgeons, and the American Society of Retina Specialists. He serves as an attending retinal surgeon at Hennepin County Medical Center and is an Adjunct Assistant Professor in the Department of Ophthalmology and Visual Neuroscience at the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Davies has a record of academic distinction that began well before medical school and continued through every stage of his training. After graduating as Salutatorian of his high school class, he was awarded an academic scholarship to the University of Rochester, where he earned a Bachelor of Science in biochemistry magna cum laude and was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa. During his time in Rochester, he also pursued additional studies in piano at the Eastman School of Music and competed as a varsity athlete in cross-country and track. At his college commencement, he received the Ayman Amin-Salem Memorial Award, presented to the graduating senior who "best exemplifies good character and citizenship, such as decency, reliability, responsibility, and congeniality." He went on to earn his Doctor of Medicine cum laude from Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta, Georgia, where he was elected to the Alpha Omega Alpha National Medical Honor Society, completed his ophthalmology residency, and served as Chief Resident. He then pursued advanced fellowship training in vitreoretinal surgery and disease at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis and the Barnes Retina Institute, one of the most respected programs in the country, where his commitment to education was recognized with the Golden Apple Award for best teacher. That same dedication to his field continues to be recognized today, as he is consistently named to the Top Doctors list by Minneapolis/St. Paul Magazine.

Within RCM, Dr. Davies is deeply committed to education and currently serves as co-director of the Fellowship Program, where he plays a central role in training the next generation of vitreoretinal surgeons. He is an active investigator in the RCM research division, participating in clinical trials exploring novel therapies for retinal disease. He has an extensive publication record and has delivered invited lectures at numerous national meetings. He has held Board seats with both the VitreoRetinal Surgery Foundation, which supports research by young investigators at academic programs across the country, and the Minnesota Academy of Eye Physicians and Surgeons. Earlier in his career, he was Chief of Ophthalmology at Fairview Southdale Hospital in Edina, Minnesota.

Outside of medicine, Dr. Davies finds renewal in the natural world – fly fishing in remote trout streams, photographing the boreal forests and lakes of northern Minnesota, and hiking landscapes that stretch from the North Shore of Lake Superior to the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness. A lifelong musician, he retains a deep appreciation for classical music. Above all, he enjoys the time he spends with his family in Minnesota, the place he is proud to call home.
